

Confirmation of Voting Delegates

At 9:47 a.m., [redacted] called on the marshals to check the attendance of voting delegates and verify their physical presence.

At 9:49 a.m., [redacted] raised a point of order, suggesting that “Yes,” “No,” and “Abstain” voting cards be distributed to voting delegates and that the doors be closed during the process.

[redacted] acknowledged the suggestion, clarifying that the exercise was a physical check of attendance to ensure that all voting delegates were present.

At 9:51 a.m., [redacted] clarified that the business meeting included an election and resolution, and requested that voting delegates occupy their assigned tables. She noted that voting delegates included [redacted]. She further recommended that marshals conduct a per-table count to determine the quorum and that voting delegates stand instead of raising their hands.

At 9:53 a.m., [redacted] raised an inquiry from the floor, noting that not all participants had received “Yes,” “No,” or “Abstain” voting cards, expressing concern regarding the accuracy of vote counting.

At 9:55 a.m., [redacted] asked whether all voting members had received their cards and directed those without cards to notify the marshals. She also reminded proxies to sit at their assigned tables and announced that the doors would be closed for voting delegates.

At 9:57 a.m., [redacted] instructed [redacted] to distribute the voting cards to voting delegates. The cards were subsequently distributed.

At 9:59 a.m., [redacted] suggested that while the count of voting delegates was ongoing, the program proceeded with the first session presentation.
